Getting on the radar

Three federal offices whose job is to know companies like this one. No deadlines, no forms, no applications. Each letter asks for one thing an office can grant without a decision.

LETTERS 3 Ready to send today	QUEUE BEHIND THEM 7 One per run from here	COST Under an hour Total, for all three

Outreach does not win awards. It decides whether the people who write topics and run programs know the company exists before the next window opens.

WHY NOW

A DOE pitch lands September 10 and a DOE teaming list is open. Both give a reason to write that is not simply asking for attention.

WHAT IS ASKED

To be added to a notification list, to be pointed at the right program manager, or fifteen minutes. Nothing that costs an office a decision.

WHAT IS NEVER ASKED

Money, a set-aside, preferential treatment, or feedback on a pending proposal. The first three are improper and the fourth is unwise.

WHO SENDS

Michael Ward, from michael@plastibiofuel.com. Federal offices answer founders, not agents.

WHAT IS CLAIMED

Only what the signed UNT report establishes. No reactor is built, no ethanol has been produced, and neither letter says otherwise.

CADENCE

One outreach per funding-loop run, advancing the queue cursor. Batch 01 is three at once because they are the front doors.

Every contact channel was read off the issuing office's own page and is dated in the Targets and Channels document. Verified August 25, 2026.
